MOTHER STILL BELIEVES DAUGHTER WAS MURDERED

Mrs. Mary Hughes of Donner avenue, has just returned from a three months' visit to the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Raub, in Morgantown. Mrs. Hughes is the mother of Nellie Hughes, who met death by drowning in the Mononaghela river at Morgantown last summer and who a coroner's jury declared committed suicide. Mrs. Hughes has never believed her daughter committed suicide and since the death of her seventeen year old child she has spent many anxious days and nights and has labored faithfully with the hope that she might yet be able to prove to the world that her daughter was a victim of an outrage which was responsible for her taking off.

Mrs. Hughes came to this office Saturday evening to tell in her own language of her personal investigation of a story that was made public some months ago relative to the ravings of a young man who was confined in the asylum at Weston, W. Va. It came to Mrs. Hughes that a young man was confied there who gave mutterings that would indicate that he had something to do with the crime. Mrs. Hughes says she hired a young attorney to go to Weston, but it was a long time before she could get him to go, and upon his return he would not impart much information to her, but she says she is positive that there is a man in the asylum who left the university at Morgantown the day after her daughter was drowned and that he attended the inquest and that suspicion was directed toward him and that this is the same fellow the press reports had reference to that had left the community after the tragedy as mysteriously as though the earth had swallowed him.

She also said that the man who claimed he saw the girl wade out into the river disappeared the next day and he has not yet returned to Morgantown and that he is an uncle or relative of the young man who is confined in the asylum, and she declares that the authorities in Morgantown and Mongalia county did not give her the proper assistance in bringing to light the real conditions which surrounded the tragedy. she says there's undercurrent of belief in Morgantown that the girl was murdered and then thrown in the river. Mrs. Hughes will continue her investigation until she thoroughly satisfies herself as to how the girl met death.

QUARTER CENTURY MARK

Rev. J. M. Jamieson left today for Hopedale, Ohio, to visit his mother. Mrs. Jamieson went to Midway where she will visit her mother. Mr. Jamieson preached the twenty fifth anniversary sermon of his pastorate yesterday. He has been ten years with the local congregation. Seven and one half years were spent at Youngstown, where during his pastorate a handsome church building was erected. Seven and one half years were spent at Jamestown. Mr. Jamieson is the first and only pastor to be called by the local congregation and it is their request that he be returned.

At the Luna tomorrow "The Lost Son" a Lubin special in two reels.

Commencing with today the Contest Office will be open all during the day and from seven until eight o'clock in the evening. At eight o'clock the office will close and all votes not in by that time will positively not be counted as having been turned in on that day. So if you wish to see the Contest Manager or wish to put in some votes you must get around before eight o'clock in the evening.

SATURDAY WAS BIG DAY

SUBSCRIPTIONS COMING IN FAST ON THE SPECIAL OFFER

Saturday was a real busy day in the contest department. The contestants seem to realize the value of the special offer and of the extra votes which they will receive and are turning in their subscriptions as fast as they can get them. We made the assertion in Saturday's paper that they would never get any more votes on subscriptions than at the present time and of course all understand that it would be impossible under any considerations to make any other offers during the contest that would make the vote scale higher or that would do more for anyone on any of their subscription than is done for them on the present offer.

This offer closes next Saturday evening at eight o'clock and it will not be extended a moment under any circumstances, so if you wish to do your best you must get in every possible subscription before that time. Start at once to collect the money on the subscriptions that have been promised you. Do not wait until the last moment as you may not be able to get them all in before the close and you will lose the extra votes.

Turn in your subscriptions as fast as you get them so that we can start the paper at once. When a person subscribes they want the paper and if you hold out their subscriptions we have no way of knowing who has subscribed and cannot get them started. Each contestant has a record in their book of the subscriptions that they have turned in and we will also keep a careful count at this office and as fast as you have turned in enough for one of the extra ballots it will be given to you.

Get in as many of these extra ballots as you can this week. You will never have a better opportunity and probably not one as good again.

POPULAR HOTEL IS NOW IN NEW HANDS

Saturday the Monongahela house changed hands and E. L. Cunningham, the owner, retires from business and within a few days he will remove to his new country home near Belle Vernon which is nearing completion. Mr. Cunningham's reason for retiring from a business career in Monessen is on account of ill health. For the past four or five years he has been afflicted with heart trouble and for several months his condition has been growing worse and his physicians urged him to give up his business and seek a quiet, healthful place away from the noise and bustle of the city. Some months ago he purchased a farm of ten acres back of Belle Vernon and started the erection of a modern country home and the house will be ready for occupancy in about ten days and Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham and daugter Ealnor will take up their residence there.

Mr. Cunningham is probably one of the best known hotel men in this section of the country and with the transfer of the license at the Mononaghela house, he relinquished the twenty ninth license he has held during his lifetime throughout western Pennsylvania. Under his management the Monongahela House has become known as one of the leading hotels of the valley and the traveling public always found comfort under Mr. Cunningham's roof, and his boarders never left the table dissatisfied, but these comforts and good cheer about the house were not alone provided by the masculine side, as Mrs Cunningham is an untiring worker, was ever alert to make the Monongahela house an ever popular place and no little credit for the success of the business goes to Mrs. Cunningham.

Mr. August Karlowsky, who has been identified with the town's business interests from the early days, is the successor. He is an experienced hotel man and for a number of years conducted the Duquesne hotel. Mr. Karlowsky will aim to keep the house up to its present high standard and will in every way cater to the public. He is well known in Monessen and vicinity and so far he has made good at every undertaking.

WORLD'S LEADING FINANCIER IS DEAD IN ROME

James Pierpont Morgan, American capitalist and large organizer of railroads and other industrial interests, died at 2 o'clock this morning while on a business and pleasure trip through Rome. J. P. Morgan is known throughout the length and breadth of the land as a financial peer. Had he lived until the seventeenth of April he would have reached the age of 76 years. Morgan is credited with creating the largest industial concerns in the world, the United States Steel company which has since been united with the Carnegie Steel. He is interested in other steel companies as well. He has been a large contributor to charitable and educational institutions throughout the country.

The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Mary McGee. Vice Pres., Mrs. Mary Lohman. Rec. Sec., Mrs. Margaret Murphy. Fin. Sec., Mrs. Margaret Bradley. Treasurer, Mrs. Mary Engle. Mistress at Arms, Mary Joyce. Sentinel, Mrs. Kathryne Kennedy. Standing chairmen, Mary Gorman, Elizabeth Allen, Sadie Jones, Sarah Donovan, Margaret Fellon. Benefit Dance

There will be a benefit dance given Wednesday evening, April 2nd in Olympic hall for the benefit of the Ohio flood sufferers. One dollar per couple will be charged and the Olympic orchestra will furnish the music. Everything is being contributed, the hall, the music and everything essential to afford a pleasant evening and it is the desire of those in charge to make the affair as much of a financial and social success as possible.

DEAL CLOSED

An important deal was made in mercantile circles this morning when W. P. Kirk purchased the drug store of R. W. Beck and the Eastman Kodak agency, which is now controlled by the Beck store. Mr. Kirk will at once remove the drug and kodak department to his store at the corner of Donner avenue and Fourth streets and will place the fixures of the Beck store in storage until his new store at the corner of Reed avenue and Sixth street is completed when they will be installed there. Mr. Kirk has employed Mr. Beck to take charge of one of his stores and manage the kodak line and in keeping with his policy he has arranged to have a competent and reliable druggist in charge of his second store. Mr. Beck has a reputation of being a prescription man of high standing and though not in business for himself, he will be pleased to remain here and wait on his many friends as they need service in his line. The prescription files of the Beck store will be kept at the Kirk store, corner Fourth and Donner where customers may have them refilled if they desire.

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

The relative percentage of the food digested is shown as follows:

Bread made with Royal Cream of Tartar Powder:

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68¼ Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67¾ Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

THREE GOOD SUBJECTS WILL BE CONSIDERED

Evangelism, temperance and missions will be the three subjects which will be considered especially at the convention of the Washington County Sabbath School Association which will be held in Washington on Thursday and Friday, June 12 and 13. Already speakers have been engaged and J. Denny O'Neil of McKeesport, has agreed to speak at one of the sessions. Matters pertaining to the convention were dacussed at a meeting of the executive committee of the association held in the tabernacle at Canonsburg, Tuesday afternoon.

No parade will be held this year because one was held in connection with the convention at Washington three years ago. The Rev. Dr. Isaac T. Headland, John C. Isley, of Greensburg and others will make addresses.

The school of methods for Sunday school workers of eastern Pennsylvania will be held in Washington at the High school building beginning June 23 and ending June 27. Mrs. Mary L. Stewart has been appointed chairman of a finance committee to secure funds for the maintenance of the school. A large number of instructors will take part in the work.

"UNCLE TOM'S CABIN"

Speaking the universal language of the heart and reflecting, like a mirror the innermost emotions of the mind, Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is more than a stage play—it is a wonderful moral classic. It argues for the two really great themes that can engage the mind of man—human liberty and the immortality of the soul. It is a play that has long been a popular favorite with the infrequent theatre goers and regular patrons alike, and wherever the Stetson company appears, it is greeted with a crowded house. There is just enough pathos during the performance to show that life is not all sunshine and then comes floods of laughter which brings one away from sorrow's pall. Specialties are interspersed through out the major number of scenes, so that the lover of high class vaudeville is well repaid for his time and money by attending the Stetson show, which will be seen at the opera house, Tuesday April 1st. There will be a special matinee for school children at 3:45.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Howard Jeffries, banker's son, under the evil influence of Robert Underwood, fellow-student at Yale, leads a life of dissipation, marries the daughter of a gambler who died in prison, and is disowned by his father. Forced to leave college, he tries to get work and fails His wife, Annie, is straight as a die, and has a heart of gold. A former college chum makes a business proposition to Howard which requires $2,000 cash, and Howard is broke.

CHAPTER II.—Robert Underwood, who had made love to Annie in his college days and was repulsed, and was once engaged to Howard's stepmother, Alicia, is a welcome visitor at the Jeffries home. Underwood has apartments in the Asturia, an exclusive apartment house. Howard recalls a $250 loan to Underwood that remains unpaid and decides to ask him for the $2,000 he needs.

CHAPTER III.—Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., foolishly encourages a dangerous intimacy with Underwood which the latter takes advantage of until he becomes a sort of social highwayman. Discovering his true character, Mrs. Jeffries denies him the house.

CHAPTER IV.—Alicia receives a note from Underwood threatening suicide unless she revokes her sentence of banishment. She decides to go and see him.

CHAPTER V.—Underwood is in desperate financial straits. Merchants for whom he has acted as commissioner in the sale of art treasures demand an accounting. Underwood cannot make good. Howard Jeffries calls at Underwood's apartments in an intoxicated condition.

CHAPTER VI.—He asks Underwood for $2,000 and is told the latter is in debt up to his eyes. Howard drinks himself into a maudlin condition and finally goes to sleep on a divan A caller is announced and Underwood draws a screen around the drunken sleeper. Alicia enters.

CHAPTER VII.—She demands from Underwood a promise that he will not take his life, pointing to the disgrace that would attach to herself from having been associated with a suicide. Underwood refuses to promise unless she will renew her patronage. This she refuses to do, and takes her leave Underwood turns out the lights, places a pistol at his temple, and fires.

CHAPTER VIII.—The report of the pistol awakens Howard from his drunken slumber He stumbles over the dead body of Underwood. Realizing his serious predicament he starts to leave the room and is met by Underwood's valet The latter discovers the body, raises an alarm and Howard is turned over to the police.

you go I'd like to ask you a few questions Sit down."

He waved her to a chair and he sat opposite her.

"Now, Mrs. Jeffries," he began encouragingly, "tell me—did you ever hear your husband threaten Howard Underwood?"

By this time Annie had recovered her self-possession. She knew that the best way to help Howard was to keep cool and to say nothing which was likely to injure his cause Boldly, therefore, she answered.

"You've no right to ask me that question."

The captain shifted uneasily in his seat. He knew she was within her legal right. He couldn't bully her into saying anything that would incriminate her husband.

"I merely thought you would like to assist the authorities, to—" he stammered awkwardly.

"To convict my husband," she said calmly. "Thank you, I understand my position."

"You can't do him very much harm, you know," said the captain with affected jocularity. "He has confessed to the shooting."

"I don't believe it," she said emphatically.

Trying a different tack, he asked carelessly:

"Did you know Mr. Underwood?"

She hesitated before replying, then indifferently she said:

"Yes, I knew him at one time. He introduced me to my husband."

"Where was that?"

"In New Haven, Conn."

"Up at the college, eh? How long have you known Mr. Underwood?"

Annie looked at her inquisitor and said nothing. She wondered what he was driving at, what importance the question had to the case. Finally she said:

"I met him once or twice up at New Haven, but I've never seen him since my marriage to Mr. Jeffries. My husband and he were not very good friends. That is—"

She stopped, realizing that she had made a mistake. How foolish she had been! The police, of course, were anxious to show that there was ill feeling between the two men. Her heart misgave her as she saw the look of satisfaction in the captain's face.

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "Not very good friends, eh? In fact, your husband didn't like him, did he?"

"He didn't like him well enough to run after him," she replied hesitatingly.

The captain now started off in another direction.

"Was your husband ever jealous of Underwood?"

By this time Annie had grown suspicious of every question. She was on her guard.

"Jealous? What do you mean? No, he was not jealous. There was never any reason. I refuse to answer any more questions."

The captain rose and began to pace the floor.

"There's one little thing more, Mrs. Jeffries, and then you can go. You can help your husband by helping us. I want to put one more question to you and be careful to answer truthfully. 'Did you call at these rooms last night to see Mr. Underwood?"

"I!" exclaimed Annie with mingled astonishment and indignation. "Of course not."

"Sure?" demanded the captain, eyeing her narrowly.

"Positive, said Annie firmly.

The captain looked puzzled.

"A woman called here last night to see him," he said thoughtfully, "and I thought that perhaps—"

Interrupting himself, he went quickly to the door of the apartment and called to some one who was waiting in the corridor outside. A boy about 18 years of age, in the livery of an elevator attendant, entered the room. The captain pointed to Annie.

"Is that the lady?"

The boy looked carefully, and then shook his head.

"Don't think so—no, sir. The other lady was a great swell."

"You're sure, eh?" said the captain.

"I think so," answered the boy

"Do you remember the name she gave?"

"No, sir," replied the boy. "Ever since you asked me—"

Annie arose and moved toward the door. She had no time to waste there. Every moment now was precious She must get legal assistance at once. Turning to Capt. Clinton, she said:

"If you've no further use for me, captain, I think I'll go."

"Just one moment, Mrs. Jeffries," he said

The face of the elevator boy suddenly brightened up

"That's it,' he said eagerly "That's it—Jeffries I think that was the name she gave, sir."

"Who?" demanded the captain

"Not this lady," said the boy. "The other lady. I think she said Jeffries, or Jenkins, or something like that"

The captain waved his hand toward the door

"That's all right—go. We'll find her all right"

The boy went out and the captain turned round to Annie.

"It'll be rather a pity if it isn't you" he said, with a suggestive smile.

"How so?" she demanded

The captain laughed.

"Well, you see, a woman always gets the jury mixed up. Nothing fools a man like a pretty face, and 12 times 1 is 12. You see if they quarreled about you—your husband would stand some chance" Patronizingly he added, "Come, Mrs. Jeffries, you'd better tell the truth and I can advise you who to go to."

Annie drew herself up, and with dignity said:

"Thanks, I'm going to the best lawyer I can get. Not one of those courtroom politicians recommended by a police captain. I am going to Richard Brewster. He's the man. He'll soon get my husband out of the Tombs." Reflectively she added: "If my father had had Judge Brewster to defend him instead of a legal shark, he'd never have been railroaded to jail. He'd be alive to-day."

Capt. Clinton guffawed loudly. The idea of ex Judge Brewster taking the case seemed to amuse him hugely.

"Brewster?" he laughed boisterously. "You'd never be able to get Brewster Firstly, he's too expensive. Secondly, he's old man Jeffries' lawyer He wouldn't touch your case with a ten-foot pole. Besides," he added in a tone of contempt. "Brewster's no good in a case of this kind. He's a constitution lawyer—one of them international fellers. He don't know nothing—"

"He's the only lawyer I want," she retorted determinedly. Then she went on: "Howard's folks must come to his rescue. They must stand by him—they must—"

The captain grinned.

"From what I hear," he said, "old man Jeffries won't raise a finger to save his scapegrace son from going to the chair. He's done with him for good and all."

Chuckling aloud and talking to himself rather than to his vis-a-vis, he muttered:

"That alone will convince the jury. They'll argue that the boy can't be much good if his own go back on him"

Annie's eye flashed

"Precisely!" she exclaimed "But his own won't go back on him I'll see to it that they don't" Rising and turning toward the door, she asked Have you anything more to say to me, captain?"

"No," replied the captain hesitatingly. "You can go Of course you'll be called later for the trial You can see your husband in the Tombs when you wish."

No man is so hard that he has not a soft spot somewhere. At heart Capt. Clinton was not an unkind man Long service in the police force and

DATES BACK TO OLD ERA

"The Third Degree" process of extorting confessions dates back to long before the Christian era. Was practiced during the Caesar regime. It was instituted in Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella when Columbus was promoting his first voyage, and since then has been used by the police departments of every large city in the world. This attack by Charles Klein is the first blow ever struck at the process and the recent ruling of the Supreme court of the United States fully demonstrates the convincing power of the remarkable drama, "The Third Degree." Since this play was launched a little over a year ago, sweating and abusing of prisoners has been restricted in several states and Commissioner Bingham of the New York police was forced to resign on account of the publicity given his brutal methods. Chief of Police Kobior of Cleveland, after witnessing a performance at the Euclid avenue theatre in that city, announced that no more prisoners would be questioned until counsel had been appointed. "The Third Degree" company will be the attraction at the opera house next Thursday night. This in all probability will be the last attraction of the season appearing at the local theatre.

PUT TO MONEY TEST

By CAROLINE KRAUSE.

Young Stacey walked into the parlor after the manner of one who had frequently been there before, deposited his box of candy on the table, snapped his fingers at the pet dog, smiled beamingly on Miss Becker and sat down.

"Eugenia," he said, "if I had one million dollars would you marry me?"

The young woman looked startled, but recovered herself. "You haven't it," she said, as though that settled the case.

"Stranger things have happened." declared young Stacey. "Other men have had unknown uncles die in Australia or Alaska and leave them vast wealth. Why am I different from other men? Why should you deny me an unknown uncle?"

"Jimmy Stacey!" exclaimed the young woman, doubtfully. "Have you really—did you—have you honestly got an unknown uncle—"

"I don't see why I shouldn't have," said young Stacey in an injured tone. "I don't see why you shouldn't think it would be so remarkable. It doesn't take any particular amount of brains to have relatives. That isn't what I'm interested in, though What I want to know is whether you'd marry me if I had a fortune left me."

"The idea!"

"Well, would you? The last time you declined my heart and hand it was on the score that we couldn't live on my salary. If I had a million now—"

"Of course," said Miss Becker, "it would make a difference."

"Eugenia!" young Stacey cried "That you should be mercenary and —what is worse—openly glory in it' What are girls coming to nowadays? Men used to be loved for themselves alone, but now a fellow has to sign and swear to an agreement to provide so many tailor suits and party dresses and so much pocket money before they will even consent to place him on the waiting list! I thought you were different!"

"I'm not mercenary," insisted the young woman "I just have common sense. I'm not going to starve to death with any man, and have him hate me because I can't greet him at dinner time with a smile and manicured hands and a dress-up dress! Men are so inconsistent, you know! They have a lurking idea that any woman who is truly feminine should be able to scrub the kitchen floor, cook dinner over a hot stove, answer the bell and the phone and polish the silver all at once, and yet greet her husband at the front door looking as though she was on her way to an extremely fashionable afternoon tea!"

"If you cared about me," said young Stacey, grimly, "you wouldn't feel that way!"

"That's all you know about it!" reclared Miss Becker. "No, you sit right over there where you are! Now, tell me, honestly—have you inherited a million?"

"Would you marry me if I had?"

"I might as well be honest," sighed Miss Becker. "I would. Only I wouldn't, because you'd say that I was mercenary."

"You would be, too," insisted young Stacey, in an injured tone. "But I'd take you!"

"Men certainly are foolish," mused the young woman. "I do l-l-like you, Jimmy. I'm sorry that you unknown uncle hasn't died"

"How unfeeling!" commented young Stacey. "I've no doubt he enjoyed life just as much as we do Eugenia, I'm awfully unhappy because you won't say yes I don't blame you for turning me down on that salary I knew I'd no business to ask you, but I couldn't help it. I don't want you to marry me because I have a million, but because you love me"

"But you haven't got a million!" cried Miss Becker in an exasperated tone, the more intense because she was on the verge of tears. "It isn't fair to—"

"Eugenia," said young Stacey, coming close to her, "I admit that I haven't a million. My unknown uncles are wretchedly healthy—they never die When they do the town authorities usually trace me and send me the bill for funeral expenses But I've had a jump in salary at the office. I'm head of the department now Do you think we'd starve on twenty a week?"

"Jimmy," said Miss Becker from his coat collar, "somehow I don't care a bit that it isn't a million! I'm so foolishly happy!"
